

Saurabh Vishnubhakat is an associate professor at the Texas A&M University School of Law and a fellow in the Duke Law Center for Innovation Policy. His research and teaching interests are in intellectual property law, civil procedure, and administrative law, particularly from an empirical perspective. He was previously a faculty fellow at Duke Law School, where he co-taught patent law, and an expert legal advisor in the United States Patent and Trademark Office, where he counseled the agency's first two chief economists on IP law and policy.