Course Description

Our usual method for presenting, analyzing, and resolving conflicts has centered around legalistic argument; the goal being to discover the "right" answer and suppress the "wrong" ones. However, the multiple worldviews operating in the world today make such an approach to conflict less viable. Reflecting this reality, ways of communicating about and resolving conflict have arisen that go beyond enforcement of rules or legal determinations of right and wrong. In this course, we will look at various methods for handling conflict and consider how we might apply them to personal, work, community and literary conflicts through lecture, small group work, role playing, reading, various written projects, and discussion.

Learning Outcomes

After completing this course, you will be able to:

- Assess your own and others' behavior in conflict.
- Determine the impact of background, context, vision, and other variables on a conflict.
- Manage conflict, using techniques of argument, negotiation, and mediation

Learning Strategies and Resources

Some learning activities, assignments and deadlines will vary depending on the delivery format of the course and may differ slightly from what is presented in this document.

You will examine a conflict from your life and the conflict in the motion picture, "A Streetcar Named Desire" by applying techniques of assessment provided in the course. Later, you will consider dispute resolution techniques for those conflicts. The textbook will assist you in introspection about your own tendencies in conflict assessment and management while teaching you research based findings about conflicts and their resolution.

Meanwhile, you will discuss real-life conflict and the movie's conflict in discussion forums to learn with classmates and deepen your understanding of assessment and management of conflict. Students will work together in groups of three to six with regard to the conflict in the film.

Learning Deliverables

- Weekly graded discussion posts and reflections, including original posts due each week on Thursday and response posts due on Sunday.
- 3 short writing assignments, 2-3 pages each, written in sequence, so that the parts join together into a full briefing of an issue with a proposed resolution.
- Case study of a conflict, identify a conflict from work or elsewhere, analyze its nature, and evaluate potential dispute resolution procedures, using an in-depth set of prompts provided in the case study outline.
