Course Description

In this course, students will learn the basic processes of employee training and development, including needs assessment, theories of learning and behavior change, training design to support appropriate selection or development of training, delivery of training, issues of transfer, and assessment of results.

Learning Outcomes

After completing this course, you will be able to:

- Apply a systematic approach to training and development, starting with needs assessment and ending with evaluation.
- Describe theories about how people learn and apply that learning to change their behavior.
- Describe different approaches to training and development, and be able to identify which ones are most useful for which kinds of knowledge, skills, abilities or attitudes.
- Describe and apply processes to support long-term behavior change – the transfer of new knowledge to work.
- Describe how to evaluate the success of training and development.

Learning Strategies and Resources

Some learning activities, assignments and deadlines will vary depending on the delivery format of the course and may differ slightly from what is presented in this document.

This class will not teach you everything about training and development. It is designed to help you learn the essentials – a systematic approach that you can use in any organization, or in your own life. You will have the opportunity to explore any of the areas that we will address in more depth if you choose.

Required Readings

Books and learning materials are available at the DePaul bookstore, at <http://depaul-loop.bnccollege.com>, or through alternative sources.

Noe, R. (2020). Employee Training and Development. (8th Ed.). New York: McGraw-Hill/Irwin. ISBN 978-1-260-04374-7

An electronic version of the text is available.

Learning Deliverables

This course contains discussion forums related to the topics you are studying each week.

This class has four case analyses. One of the case analyzes will be a group assignment. The goal is to help you view aspects of training and development from a broader perspective, informed by the ideas and approaches of a few other students. It also allows you the chance to get to know a few other students better.

There is also a term research final project.

Assessment of Student Learning
