Course Description

Designed to help you explore the art of writing stories, either stories that are "made-up" or stories based on lived experience. You will be required to complete six fiction-writing exercises, and either one short story, one autobiographical story, or one story based on an oral history collected by the you. In addition, you write a final essay in which you reflect on your learning and experience in the course.

Learning Outcomes

After completing this course, you will be able to:

- Differentiate between narrative and exposition (showing vs. explaining)
- Identify, reflect on, and apply elements of story (including elements of plot, character, and setting)
- Analyze a story's structure and voice for effectiveness
- Exercise the options involved in selecting a narrative point of view
- Apply narrative techniques to shape and create a story that is either wholly fictional, comes from your own life, or derives from the experiences of others
- Work to revise, rewrite, and edit your own work, and help others with this process
- Participate in supportive analytical discussions about elements of craft that are contributing to or detracting from a story's intended effect
- Reflect on your experience and production in the course and assess your own learning

Learning Strategies and Resources

Some learning activities, assignments and deadlines will vary depending on the delivery format of the course and may differ slightly from what is presented in this document.

This course consists of ten modules. Each module contains a Discussion topic. During these discussions, you will have the opportunity to exchange ideas with your virtual classmates about work in-progress. There is a Final Essay at the end of the course (Module #10).
